I bring a strong foundation in leadership, collaboration, and strategic thinking developed through extensive board and committee experience. My professional networks span academia, government, consumer organisations, and professional associations, and I lead oral health advocacy in Australia as Chair and Spokesperson for the National Oral Health Alliance. I have championed the importance of oral health economics in the discourse of public health policy. My interest in the IADR ANZ Secretary role is to contribute through the lens of an early career researcher, advocating for the inclusion and empowerment of emerging oral health academics. I am passionate about harnessing their energy and innovation to strengthen IADR ANZ's influence and capacity to influence public health policy and oral health research both nationally and globally.
